REINTEGRATION OF RETURNING MIGRANTS INTO THE LABOUR MARKET

Importance of reintegration of returning migrants into the labour market

⏯ Reintegration can be considered sustainable when returnees have reached levels of economic self-sufficiency, social stability within their communities, and psychosocial well-being that allow them to cope with (re)migration drivers.
⏯ Lack of decent jobs opportunity is an important driver to migration and brain drain, and limited inclusivity of labour market governance create dissatisfaction among the youth and women in the labour markets.
⏯ Labour market reintegration is one of the key factors for successful reintegration. Access to income-generating activities and decent waged jobs allows returnees to provide for themselves and their dependents. Economic reasons to emigrate and even take up hazardous and dangerous routes in search for a better life are thus reduced.
⏯ Having achieved sustainable reintegration, returnees are able to make further migration decisions a matter of choice, rather than necessity.

Major needs of returning migrants

⏯ Conducive policy environment that addresses the multi-faced needs of migrants.
锸 Psychosocial, medical and legal counselling at all stages of migration.
锸 Skills recognition in country of departure and country of return.
锸 Skills profiling of returning migrants and information on training opportunities to improve their employability in the country of return.
锸 Information on business opportunities and jobs opportunity in the country of return.
锸 Information on regulations concerning decent employment (salaried employment or self-employment).
锸 Social security benefits portability.
锸 Technical and financial support for entrepreneurs.
锸 Support to reintegration process for dependents (orientation, housing, child education, professional training, health, etc.).
The three-step systematic and integrated approach for sustainable (re)integration of returning migrants into the labour market

Step 1: Before departing

Key measure: Sensitization on risks of irregular migration, as well as on business and employment opportunities in targeted countries

Stakeholders: Government of country of origin

Role:
- Initiate and coordinate actions on information gathering, sharing and sensitization
- Provide information on conventions and agreements signed with destination countries
- Set up information desks/support services in destination countries
- Develop cooperation with targeted countries of destination to gather and disseminate information on job opportunities in countries of destination with conditions of access to their labour market

Stakeholders: NGOs and Civil Society

Role: Support in designing and implementing sensitization campaigns

Stakeholders: Private Sector (consular chamber, professional groups)

Role: Provide information on employment opportunities per sector in countries of origin

Step 2: Before the return

Key measure: Assisting in meeting returnees’ needs and preparing reintegration

Step 3: After the return

Key measure: Ensuring returning migrants’ sustainable reintegration into the labour market

Regular Assessment and Learning
