1. Indo-German Chamber of Commerce (IGCC)

The Indo-German Chamber of Commerce (IGCC) is an official bilateral business organisation with German and Indian member companies aiming to promote business relations between India and Germany. IGCC supports German industrial and commercial companies in their business activities in India, and provides services for Indian companies with business interests in Germany. It initiates contacts and meetings between entrepreneurs from both countries, organises trade fair visits and participations, provides business information, legal advice and offers advisory services regarding markets, taxation, duties, customs, business start-up and other topics. IGCC has the following offices as contact points:

2. DIHK - Deutscher Industrie- und Handelskammertag Association of German Chambers of Industry and Commerce

The DIHK is the umbrella organisation of all Chambers of Industry and Commerce (IHKn) in Germany; comprising around 80 IHKn on regional level. The DIHK represents the overall interests of German entrepreneurs vis-à-vis policymakers in the German capital Berlin and in Brussels; being the main seat of the European Union; and vis-à-vis the public in coordination with the IHKn. It renders advice to state authorities on various economic policy issues and provides business information; mainly for their member IHKn. In contrast to other BMOs, particularly industrial associations, the DIHK defends the cross-cutting interests of a broad range of industrial, commercial and service-oriented entrepreneurs via the IHKn.

The DIHK has a SME Department and a SME Committee. These bodies are the core units of a 'SME Network' (Netzwerk Mittelstand) which has been formed by DIHK and 48 IHKn. By representing MSMEs towards local and regional authorities 'Netzwerk Mittelstand' is striving for better framework conditions for MSMEs. In addition, the network informs the IHK member companies about relevant programs and initiatives offered by various institutions, and supports networking between companies through information exchange on common issues, opportunities for cooperation, etc.

3. Industrie- und Handelskammern (IHKn) Chambers of Industry and Commerce

It is mandatory in Germany to be a member in a Chamber of Commerce. The 80 Chambers of Industry and Commerce (IHKn) in Germany have together around 3.6 million industrial, commercial and service-oriented member companies. More than 90% of them are micro and small enterprises with less than 50 employees. Aim of the IHKn is to support their member companies by (i) advocating the interests of local industry towards local and regional authorities, (ii) by offering information and advisory services on various topics; and - on behalf of the state governments- (iii) by taking responsibility for vocational training activities in companies and training centers. For individual consultancy services the chambers normally only take over a mediating role by referring clients to selected consultants. In recent years several private companies have been established to offer services on behalf of the respective chamber. Approximately 7,000 experts work for the IHKn; especially on topics such as commercial laws, taxes and duties, environment, trade and industry related issues, foreign economic relations, vocational training, mediation and arbitration. Around 400,000 representatives of various enterprises work on a voluntary basis for the IHK organisation and in committees of the IHKn.

In the following list the chambers for which India is a core country are highlighted by contact data of their 'India Desk'.

4. ZDH – Zentralverband des Deutschen Handwerks German Confederation of Skilled Crafts

The ZDH is the national umbrella organisation of 53 regionally organised Chambers of Skilled Crafts and 36 sectoral organized Skilled Crafts Associations in Germany. Crafts enterprises are members of these chambers on a compulsory basis while the membership in a crafts association is voluntary. Skilled crafts is the core sector of micro and small enterprises in Germany; comprising more than 100 professions in the following areas: building and interior finishing, electrics and metalworking, woodcrafts and plastic trades, clothing, textiles and leather crafts, food crafts, health and body care trades, chemical and cleaning sector, graphic design. The ZDH represents the interests of the skilled crafts sector towards administration and policymakers on national and European level, informs their member about new policy developments and coordinates the interests of craft entrepreneurs from different regions and sectors/professions with regard to their advocacy work.

5. Handwerkskammern (HWKn) Chambers of Skilled Crafts

The 53 Chambers of Skilled Crafts in Germany are organised regionally and have in total around 595,000 businesses on a compulsory membership basis with approximately 4.8 million employees. Thus, an average crafts enterprise employs around 8 employees. The chambers do advocacy work for their member companies towards local and regional administrations, provide relevant business information, offer advisory services to enterprises and are actively involved in activities of vocational training. The HWKn employ consultants for individual or group advisory services to enterprises in technical and commercial fields, and receive public funds in order to finance these consultants.

6. BDI – Bundesverband der Deutschen Industrie Federation of German Industry

Beside the chambers and crafts associations there are numerous industrial associations in Germany. The most important federation of German industry is the BDI; representing 38 associations of various industrial sectors with around 100,000 industrial companies as voluntary members; and employing in total about 8 million people. The BDI communicates the common interests from various industries towards political decision-makers on national, European and international level. It has offices abroad in Brussels, London, Washington and Tokyo. The BDI also supports its member associations by offering information, advisory services and advocacy work in numerous economic policy fields ranging from business law, tax policy and technology issues to questions on international economic relations. Beside around 100 employees there are more than 1,000 representatives from various industrial enterprises working in different BDI committees on an honorary basis.

7. Industrial Associations – Members of BDI

The BDI has 38 member associations on national level organised by industrial sectors as shown below. In total around 100,000 industrial companies – more than 90% of them SMEs – are members of these sector associations on a voluntary basis. These member companies employ approximately 8 million people; coming to an average of 80 employees per company. The 38 member associations represent the interests of their specific industrial sector towards administration and policymakers on national level while the role of BDI is to focus on the joint interests of its member associations and represent these towards governmental actors and the society. The BDI is financed by the contributions of its member associations.
