B. Project Background

Rajasthan is severely affected by water scarcity, land degradation, poverty, and low socio-economic status. Most areas rely on single-cropping systems, predominantly rainfed and groundwater-fed irrigation. This combination of challenges has significant impacts on both human well-being and the potential for intensifying rainfed agriculture, which is often hampered by water shortages. Against this background, the project 'Supporting agroecological transformation in Rajasthan for climate and biodiversity goals in India' is a joint action of the EU and Germany. The Project will be anchored at the ongoing project, "Strengthening Gender Responsive Forest Ecosystems Management and Agroforestry" implemented by GIZ in collaboration with the lead executing ministry, MoEF & CC. The overarching initiative is to support to state-level agroecological transition of agri-food systems provided in Rajasthan towards reaching UNFCCC/UNCCD and sustainable food systems goals and working towards the implementation of GBF priorities.

The following are the broader interventions:

- Institutional capacity for promoting and implementing agroecology and agroforestry has been strengthened.
- Strengthened/supported agriculture-and natural resources-dependent communities in implementing agroecological and agroforestry measures.

Supported farmers, Farmers Producer Organizations (FPOs), and women's Self-Help Groups (SHGs) in accessing markets and obtaining certifications for agroecologically produced products.

C. Responsibilities

- Engage with relevant local-level governance institutions (e.g. Gram Panchayat/ FPO/SHGs) and private sector organisations to jointly support project activities.
- Organise and facilitate workshops, stakeholder meetings and other events.

- Engage and follow-up with the implementation partner team in their tasks with jointly agreed project activities on integration of agroforestry, value chain and certification activities report progress on the ground as per pre-determined reporting protocols.
